This is the first DLC for the XCOM 2 game. It was originally a bonus item for pre-orders, and was later made available for general purchase. Resistance Warrior is a cosmetic pack that gives the player more options when it comes to making up starting soldiers in the character pool. That is its chief & only selling point; if you like having options starting out or for randomly generated Rookies, this official mod is for you. What do you get?

Face Paints: You can now utilize that customization slot with 4 face paint options, 2 of which are military-like and two of which are cinematic. How far dedicated/gone is your new Rookie in terms of prep or attitude?

Resistance Kevlar Armor: Equip a Rookie with this and choose one of 4 options, showing a Resistance fighter with various levels of scrounged-up gear worn over street clothes. This can serve as a nice counterpoint to the default military gear, and lets imaginative payers give some variety to the ragtag bunch Bradford is handing to you for missions. (The battered second-hand XCOM: EU armor option is a nice touch for EU/VEW fans.) Colors & patterns are as per standard menu options for Pool characters. One downside is that the look goes away when the advanced armors become available; at that point the scruffy guerrilla is now a bona fide XCOM operative!

Hairstyles: These are only available at character pool generation or for random Rookies, which was a bit of a disappointment, but the wider variety of hairstyles brings the design options up to full Enemy Within/Long War standards, and even a bit further.

Headgear: A few more hats & hoods become available, including a much-needed hood, ski mask, and a nice boonie hat. A Workshop mod "Free the Hood" fixes the official oversight for facial options being displayed.

Scars: More scars, including some painful ones, but not as far gone as some of the other DLC.

Existing Character Pools: So you don't want to do the work & let someone else have the fun? No problem! The game design staff have provided two character pools of original characters using the full range of options. Select those characters for your pool, and be amazed/amused at the fighters who show up to kill aliens & free the Earth.

This is currently available for about $5 US including tax which was my purchase price. Users who purchased it earlier for more money weren't very happy, but five bucks is about right for some official flavor.
